Definition of the field of habilitation and inauguration proceedings

- Name of the field of habilitation and inauguration proceedings

Foreign languages and cultures

- Content of the field of habilitation and inauguration proceedings

The university's subject of study of habilitation proceedings and inauguration proceedings is defined by its name and content in such a way as to ensure that its content is as close as possible to the subject of study of foreign languages and cultures to which it is assigned.

The habilitation procedure and the inauguration procedure Foreign languages and cultures are aimed at education of leading experts, able to employ themselves especially in the field of scientific research, where deep expertise in general and confrontational linguistics is required and where broader knowledge of literary theory and science is expected as well as sciences and social sciences such as philosophy and culturology. An important part is also the application of knowledge from information technology for the needs of linguistic research.

The aim of the habilitation and inauguration procedure Foreign languages and cultures is to ensure the training of highly qualified experts in the extensive field of research of the given foreign language and culture with emphasis on a confrontational approach to current language research in vocabulary, grammar, pragmatics and communication, as well as in the field of literary scientific methodology, comparatistics, history and theory of literature and culture of the relevant language and ethnocultural area. Another important goal is for scientific experts to be able to lead multidisciplinary and international scientific-research teams.

- Name and code of the field of study(s) according to the system of fields of study to which the habilitation and inauguration proceedings is assigned¹

Philology

- Characteristics of the field of habilitation and inauguration proceedings

The successful candidate in the habilitation and inauguration proceedings has a deep theoretical knowledge of the methodology of linguistic or literary and cultural research, has knowledge of the latest level of scientific research in the field of foreign language research and has a broad social background in interdisciplinary research. At the same time, he/she has deep theoretical knowledge of research methodology and knowledge of the current state of research in various areas of research in a given foreign language. He/she is able to work independently, brings his/her own solutions in the field of research of a given foreign language and culture, while he/she can synthetically integrate his/her research into a broader social and cultural framework, he/she can find content links with other special scientific disciplines, especially social and humane disciplines. He/she has the ability to lead international research and multidisciplinary research teams in the field of foreign language and culture in the widest range of research topics, but also to fully participate in the work of such teams. At the same time, he/she is able to present the results of his/her scientific work in written and oral form, at domestic and foreign scientific forums. He/she is also able to educate doctoral students in foreign languages and cultures and to form his/her own science school.
